

Big Boy Know
By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT one of the oldest women in the United States ever produced was a one-time resident of Circleville. She was Mrs. Mary Beneman, who died at Ames, Iowa, in March, 1887, at the age of 114 years.

Mrs. Beneman was a daughter of Captain Christopher R. Perry of Revolutionary War fame and was a sister of Commodore Oliver Perry, the hero at the Battle of Lake Erie in the War of 1812. Another brother was Matthew Colbreth Perry, a former assistant secretary of state at Washington.

Mrs. Beneman was born at Lewiston, Delaware, on March 14, 1773. She married William Holter in 1804 and in 1806 they started to Circleville. In later years Mrs. Beneman described the journey to her friends as one of the most dreadful experiences of her life. They journeyed by means of horse and buggy and when about 60 miles from Circleville, their horse died. Her husband put their children in a wheelbarrow and arrived in this city two weeks later, Mrs. Beneman often related.

Upon arriving here, (Pickaway-co was not incorporated until 1810), they found only one frame house and a log cabin. Mrs. Beneman often told her friends that the Indians didn't trouble them at that time, but they were constantly being menaced by wild dogs and wolves.

They bought a farm and four sons were born to them here. Three of the sons, their ages above 80, were still living in 1887. The aged woman's first husband, William Holter, died in Circleville and she later married John Beneman.

Mrs. Beneman's father was a personal friend of General George Washington.

At the time of her death Mrs. Beneman had 120 grandchildren, great grandchildren and great-great grandchildren.

THAT a United States Supreme Court decision in March, 1885, effecting the title on 2,300 acres of Pickaway-co land, thoroughly stirred the county as much as the recent NRA decision stirred the entire country.

The case was entitled: Allen Campbell McArthur against James M. Glenn and others. Governor McArthur died at Chillicothe on May 12, 1839, and left a will written in 1833, leaving 2,300 acres of his Pickaway-co land in Deercreek and Jackson-twp., to five grandchildren, one of which was Allen Campbell McArthur.

Some of the McArthur heirs filed a suit to "break" the will and this the Ross-co common pleas court did in October, 1839. When Allen Campbell McArthur attained his majority in 1875, he filed a suit in the United States Circuit Court at Columbus against the persons who had purchased land of his grandfather, the governor. This suit was decided in favor of the defendants, the purchasers of the lands.

This decision was appealed and carried to the U. S. Supreme Court, where it was decided in March, 1885. The decision held in effect that the governor's will was in full force and that the title to the lands should go to the grandchildren. The three grandchildren lived at the time included young McArthur, Adora Morris and Effie Jones.

Purchasers of the McArthur lands in Pickaway-co who were dispossessed of the 2,300 acres were: James M. Glenn, trustee for the wife and children of Nelson Franklin, 900 acres; Jonathan Florence, 226 acres; Johnson Caldwell, 91 acres; Eli Lutz heirs, 30 acres; Aristides and Hephiah Hulse and Jonas Hulse's widow, 534 acres.

SENATE HOLDS FATE OF NEW NRA MEASURE

Harrison Sees Passage, King Says He May Attempt to Block it

APPROVED IN HOUSE

Anti-Trust Law Enforcement is Question

WASHINGTON, June 8.—A brisk controversy over enforcement of anti-trust laws under the new voluntary NRA bill today threatened the fate of the legislation in the senate.

The house beat down moves to delay approval and passed the bill 264 to 121, but a number of senate leaders were dissatisfied with the new Blue Eagle.

See Enactment

New Deal leaders in the senate, however, discounted the opposition. They predicted enactment of the bill after a brief fight.

Opposition forces feared the voluntary agreements permitted in the new bill to replace the old codes, would be exempt from anti-trust laws. President Roosevelt's assurance that all voluntary codes must conform to the anti-trust laws did not satisfy them. They pointed out that, in their opinion, the new bill does not repeal the provision exempting "agreements" of fair competition from the trust laws.

Even Senator Harrison (D) of Mississippi, a staunch administration leader, conceded that in his opinion the anti-trust exemption technically remained in the new NRA law.

Permit Codes

As passed by the house, the new legislation simply extends NRA until next April and repeals that portion permitting the president to prescribe codes. It permits voluntary codes, and was admittedly a bill of "stop-gap" character. There may be more NRA legislation at the present session of congress, according to leaders.

While Senator Harrison predicted early passage of the bill, Senator King (D) of Utah, threatened to block it.

"This bill is so important," he said, "that I think it should get further study. I see no reason for extending NRA, a skeleton part, or any part."

DRUNKEN DRIVER FINED $100, COSTS

Orville Timmons of Circleville was in the county jail Saturday in default of payment of $100 and costs for driving while intoxicated. He was given a hearing before Squire H. O. Evland who also suspended his driving rights for six months.

Timmons nearly wrecked the new Hupmobile belonging to Ed Helweg which Deputy Sheriff Bob Armstrong was driving. Timmons' car scraped a fender of the Hup but did no damage.

Mr. Weimer, whose birthday anniversary is the following day, June 10, is 81 years of age. He was born in Junction City, O., June 10, 1854. His ancestors came from Alsace-Lorraine in 1772.

9-MAN FIGHT FOR CITY JOB SEEN CERTAIN

Others May Yet File in Contest for $900 Mayor's Position

FRIDAY DEADLINE

Steinhauser, Barnes Join Contest for Council

The chances of a 9-man race for the $900-per-year job of Mayor of the City of Circleville loomed more a certainty than a possibility today as the deadline for filing petitions declaring candidacy was less than one week away.

It is even possible that more than nine may enter the contest for the nominations to be made by Democrats and Republicans although as yet no person other than the nine mentioned have come to the fore.

Mayor W. B. Cady, who obtained his petition then delayed putting it in circulation for quite a while because he was angling for

Four Other Democrats

Other Democrats who have obtained petitions are Adrian Yates, Boyd Horne and Raymond H. Smith while G. Edward Caskey has been reported ready to join the contest.

A lively battle is promised on the Republican side where Harry Phebus, A. J. "Bert" Lytle, E. C. Fricke and W. G. Graham are expected to file. All have petitions and are circulating them. It is the first time in a long while that so many followers of the G. O. P. have aspired to the mayor's job.

Lawrence J. Johnson, Democrat, who is completing his second term as treasurer, is uncertain concerning his plans. He has been reported he might not run and that William T. J. Howard might enter the race on the Democratic side to oppose Mack Parrett, Jr., who has already filed his Republican petition for the office.

G. O. P. to Fill Ticket

It has likewise been reported that Republican party leaders will see that they are represented in the race for every office. They have discussed the municipal race and have interviewed it, is understood, several possible aspirants for the auditor's job but have yet to make a request "stick." Two Democrats are already seeking the nomination: Miss Lillian Young, incumbent, and John Hinneford.

Carl C. Leist, incumbent Democrat, is preparing to file his petition while it has not been learned who the Republican candidate for the collector's job might be.

The G. O. P. is reported, will also have a candidate for each council position.

The first obtained a nomination.

RICHBERG READY TO LEAVE POST

WASHINGTON, June 8.—With his resignation accepted by President Roosevelt, Donald R. Richberg, who lost the Blue Eagle to a "so-called" before the United States supreme court, today prepared to leave a post in the new deal which provided one of the most costly undertakings in his life.

A three paragraph letter from the president, expressing thanks at his departure from public service, constituted the thanks for all that the Ohio legal expert risked with the New Deal.

He came to Washington two years ago to draft the NRA and a widely acknowledged liberal, a highly successful attorney and a well-known friend of organized labor.

under joint sponsorship of the U. S. army air corps and the National Geographic society.

Work Speeded
A camp has been set up in the rock-rimmed bowl for the personnel of army technicians and workers speeding to complete intricate arrangements necessitated by the adventure.

With every detail of the investigation that followed the crash being utilized, every precautionary measure known to science will be brought into play to make this summer's trial a "safety first" affair. If the pains being taken are any criterion, there will be no recurrence of the crash of last summer.

Instruments to be used already have been tested and found as nearly flawless as science knows how to make them.

Test Flight Made
A test flight was made in an army balloon from Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., April 21, with Captain Anderson as pilot. When the balloon landed on a hillside of a farm near Farrar, Mo., the delicate instruments were found to have functioned perfectly and were undisturbed in the landing.

The big new gas bag—the world's largest—built in Akron, Ohio, has a capacity of 3,700,000 cubic feet of gas, greater by 700,000 cubic feet than the gas bag used last year.

To add to the safety of the daring enterprise, helium gas will be used for the first time in a balloon flight into the stratosphere.

In all similar flights in the past, hydrogen gas, inflammable and explosive, has been used.

Through use of helium, non-explosive when used by itself or when mixed with air, the fear of explosion has been eliminated as one of the dangers.

Timmons nearly wrecked the new Hupmobile belonging to Ed Helweggen which Deputy Sheriff Bob Armstrong was driving. Timmons' car scraped a fender of the Hup but did no damage.

UTILITY PLEA SET JUNE 13

Water Company to Appear Before Commission to End Fire Protection Service.

The hearing of the Ohio Water Service Co. to cancel its fire protection service for Circleville, Washington C. H., Massillon and Marysville originally scheduled for Tuesday has been postponed until Thursday, June 13.

The water company has filed the application in the utilities commission charging it has been unable to collect back debts aggregating near the $200,000 mark.

Circleville owes the utility nearly $14,000 as a back bill and this figure is the lowest of all the cities. Massillon's indebtedness is more than $100,000.

The city will probably have a representative at the meeting Thursday before the commission. Some of the water company officials, including C. van den Berg, president, were here last Wednesday but did not attend the council meeting in the evening.

9-MAN FIGHT FOR CITY JOB SEEN CERTAIN

Others May Yet File in Contest for $900 Mayor's Position

FRIDAY DEADLINE

Steinhauser, Barnes Join Contest for Council

The chances of a 9-man race for the $900-per-year job of Mayor of the City of Circleville loomed more a certainty than a possibility today as the deadline for filing petitions declaring candidacy was less than one week away.

It is even possible that more than nine may enter the contest for the nominations to be made by Democrats and Republicans although as yet no person other than the nine mentioned have come to the fore.

Mayor W. B. Cady, who obtained his petition then delayed putting it in circulation for quite a while because he was angling for a position in the state conservation department, has filed it. He was the first "officially" in the race.

Four Other Democrats
Other Democrats who have obtained petitions are Adrian Yates, Boyd Horne and Raymond H. Smith while G. Edward Caskey has been reported ready to join the contest.

A lively battle is promised on the Republican side where Harry Phebus, A. J. "Bert" Lyle, E. C. Friece and W. G. Graham are expected to file. All have petitions and are circulating them. It is the first time in a long while that so many followers of the G. O. P. have aspired to the mayor's job.

Lawrence J. Johnson, Democrat, who is completing his second term as treasurer, is uncertain concerning his plans. As has been reported he might not run and that William T. J. Howard might enter the race on the Democratic side to oppose Mack Parrett, Jr., who has already filed his Republican petition for the office.

G. O. P. to Fill Ticket

It has likewise been reported that Republican party leaders will see that they are represented in the race for every office. They have discussed the municipal race and have interviewed, it is understood, several possible aspirants for the auditor's job but have yet to make a request "stick." Two Democrats are already seeking the nomination; Miss Lillian Young, incumbent, and John Himrod.

Carl C. Leist, incumbent Democrat, is preparing to file his petition while it has not been learned who the Republican candidate for the solicitor's job might be.

The G. O. P., it is reported, will also have a candidate for each council position.

We are observing Children's Day. This little sketch seems most appropriate. "The future of humanity is dependent, absolutely, on the character of the men and women of the future—twenty, thirty, forty years from now. And since, through a wise discipline, children—wax to receive and iron to retain—can be trained in righteousness, fixed in habits of industry, usefulness, does not the determination of the future, in a sense, rest in our hands? Do not we ourselves feel more or less, at times, some deficiency in our early training, its unwisdom or incompleteness, at this point or that, in the formation of our character? Though all of us may not realize it, the most important part of youthful training relates to education in spiritual values, as happiness and contentment far apart from and infinitely above the material benefits of the world." Show your interest in childhood. Go to Church tomorrow. Take a friend.

Eight centuries before Christ the Prophet Joel foretold an outpouring of God's spirit "upon all flesh", that is without regard to race or nationality, upon young men and old men, sons and daughters, masters and servants.

Jesus carried forward the ancient prophecies of God's gift of his spirit as he spoke to Nicodemus of the gifts of God's spirit he needed to give him true spiritual life and a place in the kingdom.

Just before his death Jesus told more fully of the coming of the Holy Spirit and his ministry to them. He would be an advocate and "standby" to them and would mean more to them than even

Scripture—Joel 2:28, 29; Luke 11:9-13; John 3:5-8; 14:16, 17, 26; 15:26, 27; 16:7-15; Acts 2:1-21, 32, 33; Rom. 8:1-17, 26, 27; 1 Cor. 12:1-13; Eph. 1:13, 14; 3:14-21; 4:1-6, 30

Eight centuries before Christ the Prophet Joel foretold an outpouring of God's spirit "upon all flesh", that is without regard to race or nationality, upon young men and old men; sons and daughters, masters and servants,

Jesus carried forward the ancient prophecies of God's gift of his spirit as he spoke to Nicodemus of the gifts of God's spirit he needed to give him true spiritual life and a place in the kingdom of God.

Just before his death Jesus told more fully of the coming of the Holy Spirit and his ministry to them. He would be an advocate and "standby" to them and would mean more to them than even Jesus had meant.

These promises were wonderfully fulfilled on the Day of Pentecost as the Holy Spirit came upon the disciples with tongues of fire and the gift of new tongues.

GONDOLA READY FOR HIGH FLIGHT

ripped and became unmanageable last summer, the trio of passengers in the metal gondola narrowly escaped with their lives. Besides Captains Anderson and Stevens the trio included Major William E. Kepner, who acted as pilot but who will be unable to participate this time because of another assignment.

The three had to bail out of the rapidly descending gondola. Only a spectroscopic carried in a parachute attached to the gondola was salvaged from among the scores of highly sensitized instruments carried on the flight.

However, although every precautionary measure to insure the success of this year's flight has been taken, still another step to make certain its conquest will be added. When the airman soar into space, a huge, 80-foot parachute will be attached to the top of the gondola in case something unforeseen once again forestalls the search for more complete knowledge concerning the cosmic ray. If the unexpected should occur to make it necessary for the crew to abandon the gondola, the metal globe will be let down to earth gently and without damage to the delicate instruments.

One New Instrument

Except for a device to test air above to determine whether it has conductivity for electricity similar to that of the earth or whether the upper air serves as an insulator as does the air closer to the earth's surface, the instruments on this year's flight will be largely the same as those destroyed in the last flight.

As the balloon is ascending, photographs will be taken at altitudes varying from 12 to 15 miles, and an attempt also will be made to obtain air samples at the different heights.

While the chief objective of the flight remains science's thirst for more knowledge of the cosmic ray, it also is hoped to shatter existing human altitude records, although this is incidental to the main objective.

For, regardless of what altitude is attained, not by the farthest stretch of imagination is it hoped that the mark set by the Soviet Government's "robot" balloon early in April can be approached.

The Russian automatic gas bag soared to a record-smashing height of 23 miles. Its altimeter showed it had climbed 129,855 feet into the stratosphere. And although there was no human hand aboard to oversee, the recordings brought back by the instruments have proved invaluable.

SON OF VETERAN FEARED SNATCHED

NEW YORK, June 8.—The paralyzing fear of a new kidnapping case gripped New York today as the best talent of the police department sought vainly for some trace of 5-year-old Jackie Kaul, missing since Thursday afternoon.

To make the picture even more terrifying, there loomed the possibility that the boy, the son of poor parents, was "snatched" by a gang who mistook him for a rich couple's child.

If this is what happened, it was thought, the boy's abductors may have done away with him as soon as they learned of their mistake.

The father, John F. Kaul, a salesman and World War veteran, makes his home in east Fifty-second street, just around the corner from fashionable Sutton place, the home of many wealthy families, and Jackie often played in this district.

The police today were bending their efforts to find a well-dressed woman who was seen leading a tearful small boy from Sutton place, at the exact time Jackie vanished on Thursday.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Three men and a blonde girl, believed to be members of the kidnap gang which was paid $200,000 for the release of nine-year-old George Meyerhaguser in Tacoma, Wash., were widely sought in Chicago today.

Police were ordered to be alert for the four, following receipt of a telegram from the state's attorney in Tacoma stating the quartet was believed heading for Chicago.

Officers were instructed to shoot to kill if they encountered the kidnapers, who were reported driving a sedan with a 1935 Washington state license number A-24829 and with motor number 309972.

Tacoma authorities listed the three men suspects merely as Dawes, Duncan and Ibraith.

BOWING TO INEVITABLE

HAPPILY for the administration and the country, the president and his advisers rejected pursuit of the trial and error policy in reshaping their course with respect to the NRA.

The conclusion of the supreme court that the recovery act as framed was unconstitutional is given ostensible acceptance at least. Congress is not to be asked to do the questionable or impossible. But the NRA will be kept alive for the next nine months with the house's approval of the Clark resolution, minus the provision, as passed by the senate, continuing the application of the codes to interstate business.

In explanation of that purpose the president's statement appeared to give a broader implication to the supreme court's decision than of the NRA relates in any way to the enforcement of working conditions or fair trade practices, adding, "all such requirements were eliminated by the supreme court."

Whether so intended or not, that part of the statement gives the impression that, whatever of good there was in the NRA in the promotion of fair competition, is now attainable only by constitutional amendment. If that was meant the interpretation is open to challenge.

The president's refusal to discuss the possibility of his seeking a constitutional amendment, as he intimated last week, will prompt more wholesale deductions whether he intends to make it an election issue. It will also excite conjecture whether he is soft-pedaling.

A bill setting up standards of employment for companies seeking government contracts and applying to all government grants, as well as some supplemental legislation giving independent status to the federal alcohol control administration and one or two other agencies about completes the revised program. On the whole the policies agreed on appear to have been dictated by sound discretion.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

ASKING FOR ACES AND KINGS

"ASKING FOR ACES and Kings" was one of the first things I learned about contract bridge, back in 1926. There are various methods of requesting partner to show you specifically just what important high honors he holds, to enable you to determine whether grand slam, small slam or a game score should be your ambitious limit of safe bidding. The hands which follow illustrate such methods with different types of holdings.

Having game in his own hand South signified that fact, and that he sought information, by making an opening call of 3-Spades. The original method, of requesting partner to bid the lowest suit headed by an Ace, holds down bidding better than the method sometimes followed wherein the highest suit headed by an Ace is first shown. Under either system 4-No Trumps is bid in case no Ace is held.

Bidding continued: North, 4-Clubs (showing the Ace of that suit); South, 4-Diamonds, showing Ace; North, 4-Hearts, to show Ace, which greatly interested the declarer; South, 4-No Trumps, merely a call for added information; North, 5-Clubs, showing the K; South 5-No Trumps, still calling for information; North, 6-Hearts, showing the K; South, 7-Spades, as partner has shown everything needed to assure a grand slam. Of course there is no play to such hands. The only item of interest is the bidding.

The next hand also offers illuminating bidding, but this time, declarer's partner, not declarer, sees the slam prospect and demands information.

Bidding went: West, 1-Heart; East, 3-Hearts, demanding feature showing; West, 4-Clubs; East, 4-Diamonds; West, 4-Spades; East, 5-Clubs; West, 6-Clubs; East, 6-Hearts, which West let alone, as far as he was concerned he saw no chance of fulfilling even a small slam contract.

The opening lead was the J of diamonds. Dummy's Ace won. West gained entry with his Ace of spades. He returned to dummy by means of his K of clubs. On dummy's K of spades West discarded his last diamond. The hand ended by having to give opponents a single trump trick.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BY BELLE BURNS GROMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston suddenly marries Lia Garonne, an American southern girl who is alone in the world except for an aunt in Peking and a father in the Gobi desert whom she has not seen in years. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. At the commandant's reception at the Navy Yard Val finds Janice Edding, daughter of Captain Edding, and his childhood sweetheart. He had last seen her in Shanghai when he said good-bye to her in a huff and that same day met Lia. The Prestons meet Maurice Cordray, aviation executive, who induces Lia to try for a part in connection with a masked ball he is supervising. Later with several others Val and Lia dine at Cordray's home. Lia and Cordray become quite interested in one another and Val is glad of a chance to talk with Janice again. Trying Chinese robes on Lia in his workshop, Cordray, also in costume, suddenly catches fire when Lia inadvertently knocks a candle lighter from his hand. He starts to run, but Val catches him and rolls him in a rug. Unhurt, Cordray thanks Val profusely for saving his life. At the ball Lia does a fantastic dance which is poorly received.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 23

IF ONLY VAL dared slip away to think this thing out. The audience buzzed about him like a giant hive of bees. His agitation increased as he realized the reaction of individuals from the snatches of conversation that reached him.

"Neurotic stuff, that last. Filled with hunger, murder, treachery, plague—"

"Very ugly, I thought. The lady seemed half-demon."

"How could a girl be so revolting to look at? Made me think of a sorcerer I once saw in Yunnan Province who peddled dried scorpions and cobra venom. I shall never like her after this."

"Nor I. I am glad now she didn't receive us when we called. She was at home, you know. We saw her go into the house just ahead of us."

"I had heard she was extremely pretty. Whoever could think so? She looks like an ugly Chinese red."

"Don't blame the girl, Maurice Cordray staged this thing."

"Sh-h! There is her husband. He will hear you."

He had heard them right enough and he was furious. Lia had exhausted herself, slaved like a little Trojan to entertain them, and this was how they appreciated it. Squaring his shoulders he crushed back his own doubts and questionings. It was of first importance that Lia should not realize how they had responded to her desire to please.

They must be kind to her! As he pressed through the crowd toward the door to the improvised dressing rooms, he looked anxiously about him. If any someone would come to his aid. Sue, he realized, would be of no use; and anyway she would not help Lia on a bet.

A clear voice beside him said, "Hello there, Val. Has Mrs. Preston come out yet? I want to tell her how thrilling I think her dance was." He turned to Jan, smiling up at him. Costumed as a lady of Turkey she was a vivid figure in tight emerald-green turban, lemon velvet jacket embroidered in golden arabesques, and wide trousers of lilac satin. Lord, he was glad to see her, and yet it hurt his pride to admit that here was the only one who could aid him. He, however, was not the one to be considered. If she wished, Jan could make Lia's path smooth and easy.

He said abruptly, "Look here, Jan. I want Lia to meet the Yard people and I don't really know any of them. Come to my rescue, will you? She isn't onto the ropes of a place like this. I'd be no end grateful if you would be her friend."

The smile faded from the girl's hazel eyes. "I have offered your wife my friendship on several occasions, Val," she said quietly. "I have called three times and telephoned repeatedly to ask you both to dine. But no luck. Mimi seems to be the only one who has successfully crashed the gate and made your Lia like her whether she wished to or not. I understand they are great friends and Mrs. Preston plays a mean game of Lady Come to See."

"That's just it, Jan," he pleaded. "Lia is such a kid." He stood twisting the tassel at his belt. Hell, couldn't she understand it wasn't easy for him to ask favors—to let her see he couldn't put his wife over with his fellow officers? His unhappy blue eyes met hers. "You see, I want Lia to be happy. It's my fault if she isn't. But somehow, I'm afraid we've got off to a bad start here. We have delayed returning calls—things like that—"

He broke off thinking it was no use to go on.

Suddenly he felt the pressure of slim fingers on his. "Oh Val, of course I'll help. I was a beast to say I wouldn't." She stood pondering an instant. "Let me think. Captain Cromwell's wife is the one for Lia to know first. Mrs. Pomfret leaves the social side of the Yard to her and she runs it with a high hand. We'll take Mrs. Preston to be introduced and if you are pleasant to Nora she will do the rest. She is really a dear, and like most older people she adores having the youngsters pay her a little attention."

She touched Val's arm and nodded toward a slim, sophisticated woman with sandy hair and a bitter mouth. "There she is," she murmured, then called across to Mrs. Cromwell, "Oh Nora, will you please wait there a moment? This is my old friend Val Preston. We want to bring his wife to be introduced, and so that you may tell her how clever you thought her dance."

At the lady's short nod of assent, he took Jan's arm and they pressed through the crowd. A moment later he saw Lia emerge from the dressing rooms and start in their direction. Cordray was with her, a magnificent Hindu Prince in armor and gold, his beard braided and tied under his chin Rajput fashion, a diamond cigarette in his turban. They moved in an interested circle of civilians, several of them artists and professional dancers, who were Cordray's guests of the evening.

In that first moment Val's heart gave a bound of relief when he saw that Lia had not guessed the audience's reaction to her dance. Triumph and elation flashed from her dark, uplifted eyes. Oh, but damn it all, why hadn't he gone to her dressing room in time to prevent her appearing in that costume and hair-dress! He hated her hair brushed back in that stark Oriental style. She still wore the sheath of shiny black brocade that fell almost to the bottom of Chinese trousers. She had hung hoops of white jade in her ears and fastened a bracelet of gardenias about one slender wrist. The effect was exotic in the extreme. Perhaps if she had been in Occidental dress and looked less like some bizarre creature from an unknown plane, the effect of her disturbing dance might have been discounted.

When she reached his side Lia cried, "Wasn't I marvelous, dear? Weren't you proud of me?" Mr. Cordray says I was absolutely professional, an artiste."

She turned away before he could even answer. Striking an exaggerated pose, eyes bright, her small hands gesticulating excitedly, she held forth under the amused gaze of Cordray and his friends. She scarcely returned Jan's greeting and when Val finally secured her attention long enough to say, "We must go to speak to Admiral and Mrs. Pomfret. And after that Jan is taking us to meet Mrs. Cromwell and some of the other Yard people," she fluttered her tiny hands in an affected gesture and answered, "I can't be bothered with the Pomfrets just now, dear. And if Mrs. Cromwell wishes to meet me, why doesn't she come here?"

The most unfortunate part of the last remark was that Mrs. Cromwell was within earshot. Val saw her gray eyes narrow, the bitter mouth quirk at one corner. Lia, the little idiot, should be spanked. But in her present state of excitement there was no use to remonstrate. Impotent, he was forced to submit as Cordray edged in between them. Laughing over his shoulder the big man said to him, "I'm stealing your rightful dance with the Manchu princess, Preston."

"Why not," Val heard her drawl as they drifted into the maelstrom of dancers. "Since the Manchu princess is your creation?"

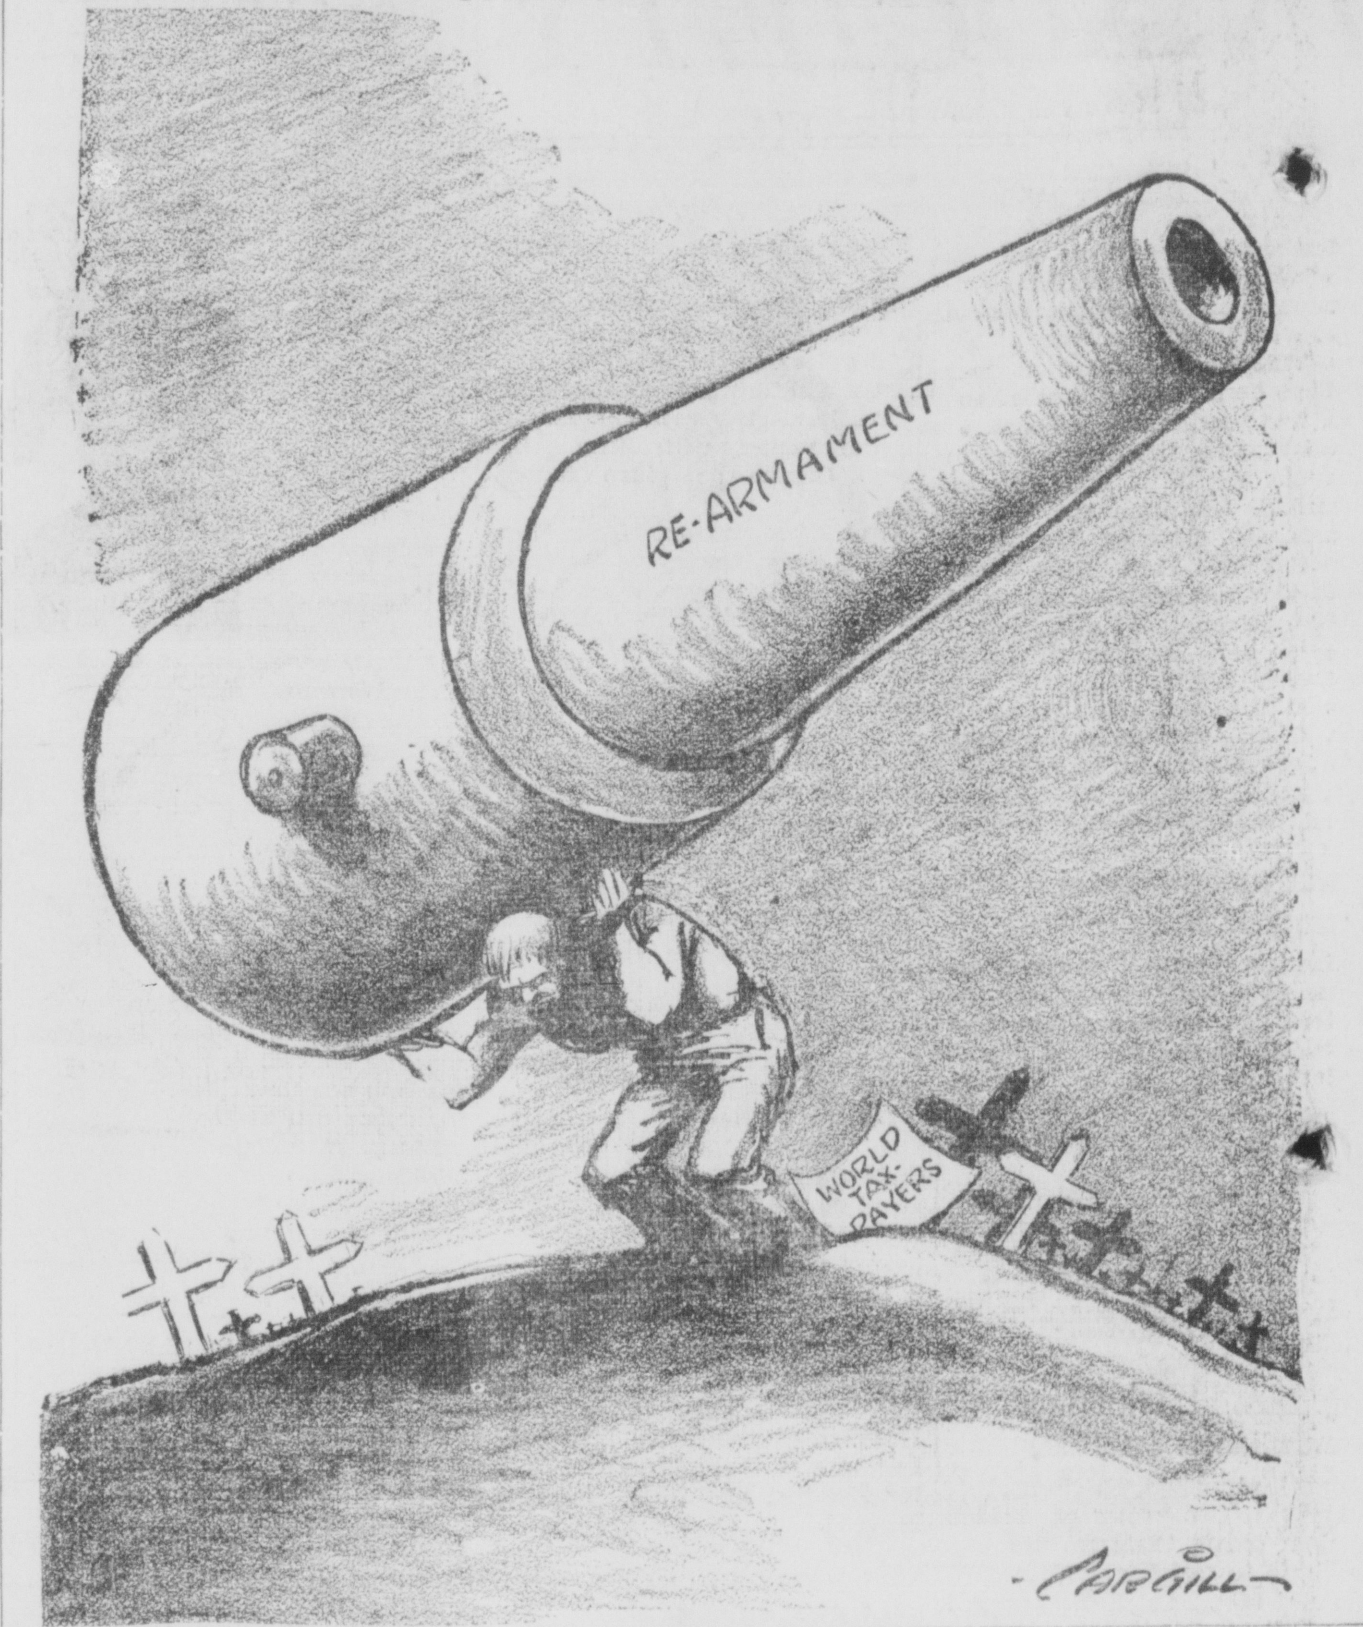

When Val turned back to face Jan, his eyes were dark with humiliation. "Behold Big Boss Preston," he grinned with an assumed nonchalance, "master of his household." Then more gravely, "Thanks for trying to help me out, Jan. It was mighty kind of you. Will you dance this time?"

Kent Townley, who had just caught up with them, offered objections, however. "This was promised to me," he demurred. "And I'm not surrendering it even to an old married gent like you, Preston."

During the rest of the evening Val tried repeatedly to dance with his wife or even to get near her, but Cordray and his friends were always ahead of him. His anger mounted and finally he flung out to the terrace where he ran across Field who offered to share the contents of his flask. It was a large flask and, as he accepted with alacrity, Val hoped his portion would banish his feeling of complete frustration.

Editorial Of The Day

SPEECHLESS
(Columbus Citizen)

How many million words of oratory and sage advice have been directed at graduation classes through all the long years of American education it would be impossible to estimate. But it would be safe to say that of all this flood of verbiage, very little has been remembered by the graduates much longer than the time it took them to doff their caps and gowns and start getting jobs. Nevertheless the tradition has survived that a commencement isn't a commencement unless it is accompanied by a speech.

But this year Ohio State University is breaking with the tradition. There will be no formal commencement this June, when 1350 graduates receive their degrees. The class will hear a word or two of farewell from President Rightmire, and that is all.

We fancy the graduates will not suffer by the change. In fact we have an idea that life might be more enjoyable in these United States if about 75 per cent of all public addresses on all sorts of occasions were eliminated.

The compelling personality which Sidney Blackmer, suave screen villain, assertedly demonstrates as a prominent lawyer in Mascot's "Behind the Green Lights," dramatic police story showing Sunday and Monday at the Circle Theater, comes from a heritage of leadership.

AT THE CLIFTONA

A gripping, melodramatic tale, set in the eerie confines of London's world famous Chitlona, Paramount's "Limehouse Blues" brings George Raft back to the screen with two leading ladies: the beautiful Chinese Anna May Wong and demure Jean Parker. The picture is at the Cliftona Saturday.

It is a tale of tangled threads of love and devotion, set against a background of smuggling, oriental luxury and strife between the underworld and the police.

The film presents Raft as Harry Young, who, under the disguise of a respectable cafe owner, has become the king of the notorious London underworld.

Household Arts

PATTERN 5155
There is nothing quite as decorative as a basket of colorful flowers. And if you want to dress up your bedroom or dining room, choose these graceful motifs. The basket is lovely on a scarf with the smaller motifs used on the vanity set. Matching motifs for a bedspread can be had in pattern 5122. Or, if it's the dining room you're planning to smarten, the motifs will make a delightful in-between cloth and buffet set besides refreshment linens. And when necessary they are in warm weather!

In pattern 5155 you will find a transfer pattern of two baskets 7x9 inches, two flower motifs 2 1/2 x 3 inches and six 3 1/2 inch corners; suggestions for uses and color, and material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

THOMPSON ON TOP HEAP IN BIG TOURNNEY

West Coast Golfer Cards 146; Krueger in Second With Sarazen Close.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Oakmont, Pa., June 8.—Sixty-six survivors who somehow eked their way through the first half of the tournament, when Jimmy Thompson of Long Beach, Cal., as their leader, swung out over Oakmont's famed Highland course this morning for the final 36 holes of the National Open golf championship. Fair weather was expected to atone, if any atonement is necessary, for the storm that broke over the hazardous course yesterday, breaking with it the hearts of those unfortunate enough to be playing at the time. Thompson, a prodigious hitter, put two 73's together for a 146 score and the overnight leadership of the great field. Those 73's were carded before the storm really descended. How the big hitter will fare over the final rounds remains to be seen. Anything is possible on this course.

Krueger in Second
The Californian learned some of the answers to Oakmont, however, when he passed Alvin (Butch) Krueger, the Beloit, Wis., sensation who dominated the first round, and he may continue to burn up the course. Krueger, with a 143 two-round total score, started the final round in second place. Gene Sarazen, former open champion and the favorite, carded a respectable 149, while Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, occupied the fourth position with a 153. Sarazen, however, is still the short-odds menace. After yesterday he made up his mind never to play a safe shot again, and the slashing, slamming natural game that is all his will be exhibited in his final-day tactics. This decision to abandon safety was made on the ninth hole yesterday, where a terrible 7 broke into his life as he three-putted in shocked view of a gallery of 3,000 breathless standees. His first putt of 11 feet skidded four feet past the cup and the return effort failed.

Others Have Chance
Unless some miracle takes place, one can dismiss all those with a half-way total of more than 153. But among those who still have a major chance are some steady campaigners. Included in the group are such as: Ted Luther, Herman Barron, Horton Smith, Ray Mangrum, Dick Metz, Vic Ghezzi, Denny Shute and Paul Runyan. And, of course, Thomson, Krueger and Parks.

GOLF FACTS

ALEX MORRISON SAYS:
A hole never is finished until the ball is in the cup, and a round is never complete until the last hole has been played. This means that every player's efforts should be respected until he has held out.

Too many players have become careless about their deportment around the greens. Having holed his last putt one player will walk away while others are trying to hole out. It would be just as logical to walk down the fairway while others in your foursome are trying to drive. You wouldn't think of moving in the line of vision while some fellow is playing out of a bunker. The tension that generally comes to those trying to hole a putt is even greater. Respect their attempts to make a decent score. Similar respect may help you win a big match some time.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

Start Football Early

Indications are that football practice at Circleville high school will be started, just as early as possible this fall.—The new coach, E. E. Reger, has been in the city and met a number of his hopefuls at the junior-senior banquet. Nearly all schools in the Central Buckeye league took advantage of the new spring rule and had their athletes in the harness with most coaches receiving the advantage of this extra practice.—It tends to give a coach a chance to learn what his material can do.

No Affect Here

The ruling did not benefit Circleville athletic, however, since P. S. Herberholz was too busy with baseball and track to call out the lads for spring drills.—The fact that Herberholz knew he wouldn't be back this fall might also have had something to do with it.

Nucleus Is There

While grid material here this fall will be nothing about which to write home the nucleus of a good team is there in John Griffith, Don Henry, Will Friley, John McGinnis, and Junior Ruff, with Dick Nelson, Adkins, Merriam, Jackson, Fickard, Cooper, Pile and others given chances to make the squad.—It is hoped John Jenkins will have been able to lower a family barrier against football in time to report. Jenkins would make a keen fullback although he is inexperienced.

Horsemen in Action

Two Circleville natives are making plans for active campaigns as race drivers and trainers in the Grand Circuit and other units this summer and fall. They are Harry Short, brother of Auditor Forrest Short, and Charlie Valentine. Both will appear in the Grand Circuit opener in Lexington, June 15. Short's favorites, T. D. Van and Marabo Hanover, have been timed at 2:10 while Calumet Devil and Tracy Hanover are doing 2:11. Valentine's favorites are Bonny-Valentine, 2:04; Calumet Finery, 2:10; and David Thornton, 2:10.

We have only stumbled on a few barbed of physical laws from the great pool of knowledge. Charles F. Kettering, famed engineer.
